LAFAYETTE SCHOOL DEDICATION MONDAY

WILL HAVE ALL-DAY GATHERING AT NEW BUILDING

TWO YEAR HIGH SCHOOL

Will Have Prominent Speakers and Movies by Maryville Chamber of Commerce

Patrons of Lafayette School District, No. 171, wanted their children to have a high school education. They attempted to form a consolidated district, but the adjoining districts refused to join with them. So the Lafayette parents went ahead and and built a new $4,000 building all by themselves, and they will dedicate it next Monday with an all day gathering.

The Lafayette school was one of the leading vitalized agriculture schools of the county last year. Its exhibits at the state fair at Sedalia won many prizes. In the new building, which consists of two rooms, there is a basement 30 by 30 feet, which is equipped to carry on the vitalized agriculture courses and also courses in domestic science. There is a fully equipped laboratory and a good library.

The high school will offer a two year course and will meet the requirements laid down by the department of education of the state government. There will probably be thirty students enrolled in the high school. Fifteen or more are expected to come from other districts, as there is no high school nearer than Guilford, Stanberry and King City. Centrially located midway between these three towns, Lafayette patrons believe their school occupies a strategiv position and is destined to grow in enrollment.

Besides providing the new building the patrons modernized and repaired the old building, installing light and heat.

The all day session Monday includes a basket dinner at noon and speeches by W. A. Blagg, president of the Board of Regents of the State Teachers College; Prof. Harry A. Miller, head of the department of public speaking of the College; Fred Hull, editor of the Maryville Tribune, R. A. Kinnaird, county farm agent; and Bert Cooper, county superintendent of scohols.

In the evening the Maryville Chamber of Commerce will send a delegation with moving pictures. Ice cream will be served.

Artie R. Cotted, who was teacher at the Lafayette school last year, will again be included in the faculty. Miss Florene Allen of Stanberry will be principal of the high school.

Lafayette is probably the only rural district in Missouri which will maintain an independent high school this year with no financial help from outside sources. The progressive school board is composed of John A. Martin, president; John A. Roberts, clerk; and Walter Giffin.

CONSCIENTIOUS BOSSY HAS NO VACATION IN 21 YEARS

Black Half-Jersey Cow Owned by Samuel Lutz of Pickering Never Stopped Giving Milk.

Milk prices would be lower if all cows performed their milk giving functions as conscientiously as one recently owned by Samuel Lutz of Pickering. The cow was a black half-Jersey, was 21 years old and had never been dry, according to Mr. Lutz. She had raised several calves, the last one having been shipped to market about eight years ago. Her owner milked her for nineteen years during which time the cow never took a vacation.

"This is no fish story, but a true story", vouches Mr. Lutz. The cow was sold to Loren Chambers, a Pickering stock shipper.

SHERIDAN BARBER STABS ROBT. REECE

SHERIFF SEEKS REX BOND, WHO ESCAPES FROM TOWN

VICTIM NOW IN HOSPITAL

Knife Penetrates Between Ribs, Entering Liver.—Weakened by Loss of Blood.

With a deep knife thrust which penetrated between the ribs to enter the lower part of the liver, a cut which laid open the flesh to the bone from the elbow of his right arm to the base of the thumb, a slash on his back and several smaller cuts, Robert Reece, part owner of the drainage ditch company which is straightening the Platte river near Sheridan, has been taken to a St. Joseph hospital, where the seriousness of his condition cannot be determined for two or three days.

Reece was stabbed at Sheridan last night by Rex Bond, a barber. The fight occurred about 8 o'clock near the poultry house. There are conflicting reports as to its cause, but one version from a reliable source this afternoon said the quarrel grew out of a joke.

There was no prolonged disturbance before the fight, and few of the crowd in town to attend the band concert were aware that the stabbing had taken place until after it was all over. Bond left town before the Worth county sheriff arrived and has not been found.

Reece was seriously weakened by loss of blood. The most serious wound is the one inflicted by the knife when it pierced the liver. The slash on the right arm was a serious wound but not dangerous except for the loss of blood. Reece was taken to St. Joseph this morning.

HARD TO TELL WHAT STYLES WILL BE POPULAR—CORWIN

Clothier Returning From Chicago Says More Freedom Will Be Allowed in Choice.

It's hard to tell just what styles will be most popular with well dressed men of the nation, according to C. C. Corwin of the Corwin-Murrin Clothing Co., who has just returned from a buying trip to Chicago.

Each house seems to have a favorite style or fabric of its own, while all of them are holding back to see what "takes" best with the buyers, according to Mr. Corwin. Sentiment is generally united, however, in favor of checks for fall wear, and the popular herring bone stripe is still "good."

Style dictates are somewhat more liberal this fall, allowing more choice on the part of the wearer. Both coats and trousers are somewhat more loose fitting, getting away from the military craze of a year or so ago. Sport models, however, are displayed, many of them featuring half or full belts.

COUNTY TEACHERS MEETING BEGINS

PRACTICALLY ALL PRESENT IN SPITE OF MUDDY ROADS.

CONTINUES TOMORROW

Dr. Jesse Miller Leads Round Table Discussion on School Laws and Legislation.

Although this morning's session of the county teachers' meeting opened fifteen minutes early, 150 teachers were present when Bert Cooper, county superintendent, called the meeting to order. Muddy roads delayed others, but 215 were present before the end of the morning program.

Miss Fanny Buchanan of Camden, N. J., spoke on "Music Appreciation," and Miss J. Z. Campbell of St. Louis, who was placed on the program for tomorrow was changed to today. Her topic was "Drawing." Prof. P. G. Holden of Chicago gave an address on "Teaching Boys and Girls, Instead of Subjects."

Miss Lorraine Hathaway, teacher of the Myrtle Tree school, gave a demonstration of her method of starting beginners in reading. Using little Junior and Roy Dowden as her subjects, she took only twelve minutes to give them their first lesson.

This afternoon a special committee appointed by Miss Buchanan submitted a report and gave a demonstration of a Maypole drill. Uel W. Lamkin, president of the State Teachers College, gave an address, and Professor Holden again spoke to the teachers.

After the program, departmental meetings were held, with Representative Jesse Miller conducting the round table in the high school section on "School Laws and Legislation." The grade and rural section conference on course of study was led by George W. Somerville of Hopkins and W. H. Burr of Brookings, S. D.

Demonstrations of vitalized agriculture by the short course students also began this afternoon. They will be outlined tomorrow.

LAST MONTH NOT SO HOT, SAYS OBSERVER J. R. BRINK

Was Two Degrees Hotter Than Average, but Nothing Like August of '13.

August was a slightly hotter month than the average for the last thirty years, according to Official Weather Observer J. R. Brink, but it was far from being the hottest August on record. The average temperature for the month was 75.7 degrees, just two degrees above the thirty year average. In 1913, however, the average temperature was 81.3 degrees. The lowest average was in the following year, 1914, when the temperature averaged 68.4 degrees.

Taking only the highest temperature each day during the last month, the average was 87.1 degrees. The minimum temperatures averaged 64.4 degrees.

The amount of rainfall during August was slightly less than the thirty year average, a precipitation of 3.77 inches being recorded. The normal rainfall is 4.03 inches. The wettest August on record was in 1903, when downpours amounting almost to cloudbursts made the total precipitation 11.63 inches. In very great contrast is the "dry August" of 1894, when only .12 inch of rain fell.

The rainfall of yesterday and last night amounted to .83 inch, according to Mr. Brink.

GRAND JURY TAKES UP HAMMOND CASE

IS EXPECTED TO INDICT MIKE WREN FOR MURDER.

CONSIDERS TESTIMONY

Findings of Coroner's Jury are Laid Before Secret Tribunal at Clarinda.

The coroner's verdict and testimony in the Raymond Wren case were placed by County Attorney Anderson before the grand jury in session at Clarinda, Ia., this week. Wren who confessed to the murder of his chum Ross Hammond was brought by Sheriff Borland of Page County to appear before the grand jury. Other witnesses also appeared.

The work of the grand jury being secret, the findings may not be known until they report in open court and the case is entered on the judge's docket. It is expected that an indictment against Wren will be found and entered on the charge of murder, and that the case will be heard probably at the term of District Court at Clarinda scheduled to begin October 18.

The coroner's jury brought in a verdict that Wren was the murderer of Hammond.

The following testimony at the Coroner's inquest, held Tuesday at Clarinda, was taken from this week's issue of the Clarinda Herald:

No "Woman in The Case"

Frank R. McKee wa sthe main witness in the case. He told to the jury the story of finding the body in the cornfield on his farm, of having stopped William Harrison and W. O. Campbell who were passing, asking them to come in see what he had found; how he then went to his house and phoned to the county officers going back to the cornfield and preventing sightseers from entering the field until the officers had arrived. The details of the position of the body, the articles found nearby, including needle and thread, and the evidence of the body having been dragged for a distance in the field were fully discribed. Mr. McKee gave it as his judgement that the tracks of a woman's shoes in the field were those of his wife, who had been walking in the field sometime before the tragedy happened, and probably had left footprints in the ground that may have been still visible when the officers arrived and made examination of the surroundings.

32 Cal Bullet Caused Death

Dr. J. W. Sellards, testified to having made a postmortem of the body Tuesday morning, the body having been exhumed for the purpose; giving evidence as to the bullet having entered the head above the left eye, toward the top of the forehead, and that upon sawing off the vertex of the skull he found a 32 caliber bullet and jacket embedded in the brain, this being the cause of the man's death. He presented as evidence to the coroner certain teeth which he had removed from the man's head

E. E. HARPER RETURNS TO HIS HOME IN KANSAS CITY

Has Been in Maryville Several Days Clearing Up the City Water.

E. E. Harper left for his home in Kansas City this afternoon after a few days' trip here in an effort to clear up the city water. Mr. Harper was successful, the water at the present time being very clear. Mr. Harper was the engineer who had charge of rebuilding the water plant here.

Frequent analysis of the city water, together with inspection of the plant, will keep the city's water supply safe for drinking and also clear, said the engineer. Treatment of the water against typhoid germs is already used at the plant.

CLYDE PERKINS BUYS BARNARD MEAT MARKET

Democratic Postmaster at Barnard Is Going into A New Business.

Clyde A. Perkins, postmaster at Barnard purchased the Meat Market owned by Chas. Hackl of that town, the deal being completed Friday evening, and taking possession Tuesday. Perkins is a Democratic appointee to the position of postmaster and as the examinations to fill his place have already been held, he is looking out for a business.

The Barnard Bulletin says: Partitions are being changed and counters placed in the building and by the last of this week, Perkins will have a modern restaurant in connection with his meat market. He has employed Mrs. A. S. Blagg as cook and Miss Bonnie Hainey for the dining room. He says his motto will be "We will serve you what you want when you want it."

Besides being postmaster and prominent in politics, Perkins is the largest man in the Middle West, which ought to make a good advertisment for his eating house.

TO DECORATE CITY FOR CELEBRATION

WILL "DRESS UP" FOR COMPANY SEPTEMBER 7.

ADDRESS BY DR. KELLAR

Marker in Library Yard Will Be Unveiled By Direct Descendants of Town's First Woman.

Maryville will be in Sunday-go-to-meetin' dress for the Soldiers' Reunion and Centennial Celebration to be held next Wednesday, September 7. Her "glad rags" will be furnished by the Shenandoah Flag and Decorating Co., of Shenandoah, Ia., with which a contract has been drawn to decorate the city.

The Shenandoah company did the decorating here last year at the Soldiers' Reunion and Merchants' Fall Opening. This year it agrees to decorate two additional blocks.

Main street will be decorated from First to Sixth streets. Third street from Buchanan to Market and the east and north sides of the square will also be "dressed up." Special decorations will be placed on the Maryville Free Public Library, where the unveiling of the marker commemorating the building of the first house in Maryville will be held.

To greet the Shriners' band, drum corps and patrol of St. Joseph, the band stand in the court house yard will be decorated in the Shriner colors. The company with whom the decorating contract was made was one of the principal decorating firms at the Shriner convention in Des Moines, according to Floyd L. Musgrove, the representative who made the arrangements with the Chamber of Commerce.

Individual store will also be decorated at the cost of the merchants.

The work of fixing the bronze tablet in the granite boulder in the library yard has been finished and the arrangements completed for the unveiling. The dedicatory address will be given by Dr. Fred Keller of the State Teachers College, and the marker will be unveiled by Graham and Mary Donna Malotte, who are direct descendants of Mrs. Mary House Grahm, for whom the town of Maryville was named.

FEDERAL TROOPS ARE ORDERED TO DISPERSE ARMED BANDS.

FIERCE FIGHTING RAGES

Defenders Hold Invading Strikers Over Twenty-Five Mile Front in Logan County.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The question of martial law in West Virginia will be discussed this afternoon by President Harding and his cabinet before the final promulgation of the President's order, Secretary of War Weeks announced.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Federal troops today were ordered into West Virginia to disperse the armed bands of miners threatening an invasion of Mingo County region. Major General Harboard announced the Nineteenth Infantry was ordered from Camp Sheridan, O., and the Twenty-Sixth Infantry from Camp Dix, N. J.

Camp Dix, Sept. 2—Three trains bearing the Twenty-Sixth Infantry left here at 10 o'clock for West Virginia. The Sixteenth Infantry is being equipped, although not ordered to leave. The Twenty-Sixth will report to General Bandholtz at Charleston.

Logan, Sept. 2.—The miners are assaulting the Logan border at every point in the heaviest fighting since the invasion. A twenty-five mile half circle around the courthouse in under machine gun and rifle fire. The miners are being repulsed but at 1 o'clock were continuing their efforts to dislodge the defendants. Four miners are known to ahve been killed. The miners are planning a heavy attack for late this afternoon, according to the best information .

Logan, Sept. 2.—Furious fighting is in progress at Blair mountai nand Crooked Creek. Casualties occurred at both places. Six prisoners were captured by the Logan defenders at Blair mountain.

Charleston, Sept. 2.—The defenders are holding the miners over a twenty-five mile front in Logan County, the governor's office was officially advised at noon.

Logan, Sept. 2.—Aerial bombs were dropped by the government's airplanes today, causing a hasty retreat of miners from Hewitts Creek. No casualties were reported.

An effort was made to burn and dynamite the Cheaspeake & Ohio Railroad bridge on the Guyan Valley division at Big Creek early today. A portion of the bridge was burned but the dynamite was discovered by a sentinel and the flames extinguished. Heavy guards were thrown around all railroad proprety.

An official communique at 8 o'clock said:

"Heavy firing took place at Mill Creek at 5:30 o'clock today. Miners made a concentrated attack but were thrown back. The firing continued all night at Crooked Creek. The miners were unable to advance."

SMALL CROWD CHANCES "DARDANELLA" LAST NIGHT

Antics of Leading Comedian Please Audience. Had a Good Quartet.

With a good comedian heading a company of fair acting ability and good singing voices, "Dardanella", pleased the small crowd which took a chance on the opening attraction of the 1921-22 theatrical season at the Empire Theater last night.

The leading characters were generally good. Daranella herself made a creditable attempt to reproduce the high bird notes of Amelita Galli-Curci, although they might have seemed a trifle flat if the more famous soprano had sung from the same stage. A male quartet was enthusiastically encored by the audience at each appearance. The organization contained a bass of unusual depth and power. The chorus was young, if not numerous, and possessed fair voices, in addition to the other well recognized requisites for chorus work. The play itself had little plot and no serious thought, but nobody expects either in a musical comedy.

Identified by Brother.

Eddie S. Hammond, having recently come from Baker, Oregon, gave testimony before the coroner's jury to the body exhumed that morning being that of his brother, Ross W. Hammond, being certain of this for one reason by one broken tooth and other being filled. He told the story of his brother having left Baker, Oregon, at five in the morning of July 27th, in company with Raymond Wren, driving a stripped Maxwell car which had a light blue color and was the property of the witness and his brother, who had written back from Green River, Wyo., on Aug. 1st and again from Ogalala, Nebr., the latter card saying that they were expecting to drive through St. Joseph, Mo., in search of work. The next he knew was when reading in his home paper, the Baker Herald, of the story of the murdered man having red hair and driving a blue colored Maxwell; followed later by a telegram from the Missouri relatives and others asking about his brother. Upon his arrival in St. Joseph he says he identified the effects in the car as being those of his brother, some photographs of Baker girls being part of the effects. He testified to having interviewed Wren in the St. Joseph jail, where Wren asked him if they were going to "dig up" his brother, saying it was no use, that he (Wren) had shot him and expected he would be "sent up" for it.

Others who testified before the coroner were Chester C. Thompson who filled the blue Maxwell with gasoline when it came through Shenandoah, and Carl C. Burch who was drivng a drove of hogs north of Clearmont when a man driving a blue Maxwell fast changed gears before reaching the herd, then drove right through the herd without waiting for the hogs to open a way for the car to pass through. Wm. Harrison and W. O. Campbell gave testimony similar to that of Frank McKee's.

WORK BEGINS ON BARNARD BOLCKOW DRAINAGE DITCH

According to Barnard Bulletin, the Dredge Is Working Twenty-Four Hours a Day.

Work on the Barnard-Bolckow drainage ditch began last week and the ditch is being excavated rapidly, the dredge working twenty-four hours a day, according to the Barnard Bulletin.

The machine is a dry land dragline dredge, running on a track. As it evacuates the dirt with its own power, it lifts a section of its track from the rear to the front of the machine, lets down the big shovel, sticks it into the dirt and pulls itself along the track. All this work is done by one man at the engine, who uses both hands and both feet in controlling the machinery.

A second machine will be unloaded at Rosendale and will begin operations there as soon as it is possible for the machine to be shipped and erected. It is of the same type as the one now working near Bolckow, except that it is what is known as a walking machine and does not run on a track. It has large flat bottomed legs or stilts and by rearing the front end up and extending this leg and drawing itself ahead with the shovel, it is able to "walk" along in a slow, clumsy, but nevertheless effective manner.

It is estimated that with good weather throughout the winter the work will be completed by the middle of the summer.

BAN ON TRUCK SHIPMENTS GIVES BOOTLEGGERS BLOW

Believed New Order Will Reduce Illicit Supplies of Liquor—Fake Holdups Staged.

Washington, Sept. 2.—"Bootleggers have been hit squarely between the eyes."

This was the gleeful view held by Roy A. Hayes, chief of the Prohibition Bureau.

He feels sure that one of the worst of bootlegging evils has been successfully met by the prohibiting of shipments of liquor by truck.

Commissioner Hayes said bootleggers have been getting a large part of their illicit supplies over the "truck route."

The methods have varied, he said. One of the favorite means of getting fresh liquor stocks is for bootleggers to conspire to hold up shipments en route from distillery or bonded warehouse to the person who bought the liquor.

The fact that shipments of liquor by truck have been permitted has made it exceedingly difficult, he said, to detect other movements of illicit liquors from other sources than those of distilleries.

Under orders now being enforced by Commissioner Hayes, dry law agents will keep a stricter watch out on all highways and, under new methods employed, expect to be able to detect liquor caravans with less difficulty.

PART ONE

By the end of October, with the dispersal of that foliage which has served all summer long as a pleasant screen for whatever small privacy may exist between American neighbors, we begin to get our autumn high tides of gossip. At this season of the year, in our towns of moderate size and ambition, where apartment houses have not yet condensed and at the same time sequestered the population, one may secure visual command of back yard beyond back yard, both up and down the street; especially if one takes the trouble to sit for an hour or so, daily, upon the top of a high board fence at about the middle of a block.

Of course an adult who followed such a course would be thought peculiar; no doubt he would be subject to undesirable comment, and presently might be called upon to parry severe if, indeed, not hostile inquiries; but boys are considered so inexplicable that they have gathered for themselves any privileges denied their parents and elders; and a boy can do such a thing as this to his full content, without anybody's thinking about it at all. So it was that Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen and a few months, sat for a considerable time upon such a fence, after school hours, every afternoon of the last week in October; and only one person particularly observed him or was stimulated to any mental activity by his procedure. Even at that, this person was affected only because she was Herbert's relative, and of an age sympathetic to his—and of 'n' sex antipathetic.

In spite of the fact that Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., thus seriously disporting himself on his father's back fence, attracted only this audience of one (and she hostile at a rather distant window) his behavior really should have been considered piquantly interesting by anybody. After climbing to the top of the fence he would produce from interior pockets a small memorandum book and a pencil; seldom putting these implements to immediate use. His expression was gravely alert, his manner more than businesslike; yet nobody could have failed to comprehend that he was enjoying himself, especially when his attitude became tense—as at times it certainly did. Then he would rise, balancing himself at adroit ease, his feet aligned one before the other on the inner rail, a foot below the top of the boards, and with eyes dramatically shielded beneath a scottish palm, he would gaze sternly in the direction of some object or motion which had attracted his attention; and then, having satisfied himself of something or other, he would sit again and decisively enter a note in his memorandum book.

He was not always alone; he was frequently joined by a friend, male, and, though shorter than Herbert, quite as old; and this companion was inspired, it seemed, by motives precisely similar to those from which sprang Herbert's own actions. Like Herbert, he would sit upon the top of the high fence, usually at a little distance from him; like Herbert he would rise at intervals, for the better study of something this side of the horizon; then, also concluding like Herbert, he would sit again and write firmly in a little notebook. And seldom in the history of the world have any sessions been invested by the participants with so intentional an appearance of importance.

That was what most injured their lone observer at the somewhat distant back window, upstairs at her own place of residence; she found their importance almost impossible to bear without screaming. Her provocation was great; the important importance of Herbert and his friend, impressively maneuvering upon their fence, was so extreme as to be all too plainly visible across four intervening broad back yards; in fact, there was almost reason to suspect that the two performers were aware of their audience and even of her goaded condition; and that they sometimes deliberately increased the outrageousness of their importance because they knew she was watching them. And upon the Saturday of that week, when the notebook writers were upon the fence at intervals throughout the afternoon, Florence Atwater's fascinated indignation became vocal.

"Vile things!" she said.

Her mother, sewing beside another window of the room, looked up inquiringly.

"What are, Florence?"

"Cousin Herbert and that nasty little Henry Rooter."

"Are you watching them again?" her mother asked.

"Yes, I am," said Florence, tartly. "Not because I care to, but merely to amuse myself at their expense."

Mrs. Atwater murmured deprecatingly, "Couldn't you find some other way to amuse yourself, Florence?"

"I don't call this amusement," the inconsistent girl responded, not without chagrin. "Think I'd spend all my days starin' at Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Junior, and that nasty little Henry Rooter, and call it amusement?"

"Then why do you do it?"

"Why do I do what, mama?" Florence inquired as if in despair of Mrs. Atwater's ever learning to put things clearly.

"Why do you 'spend all your days' watching them? You don't seem able to keep away from the window, and it appears to make you irritable. I should think if they wouldn't let you play with them you'd be too proud—"

"Oh, good heavens, mama!"

"Don't use expressions like that, Florence, please."

"Well," said Florence, "I got to use some expression when you accuse me of wantin' to 'play' with those two vile things! My goodness mercy, mama, I don't want to 'play' with 'em! I'm more than four years old, I guess; though you don't ever seem willing to give me credit for it. I don't haf to 'play' all the time, mama; and, anyway. Herbert and that nasty little Henry Rooter aren't playing, either."

"Aren't they?" Mrs. Atwater inquired. "I thought the other day you said you wanted them to let you play at being a newspaper reporter, or editor, or something like that, with them, and they were rude and told you to go away. Wasn't that it?"

Florence sighed. "No, mama, it cert'nly wasn't."

"They weren't rude to you?"

"Yes, they cert'nly were!"

"Well, then—"

"Mama, can't you understand?" Florence turned from the window to beseech Mrs. Atwater's concentration upon the matter. "It isn't 'playing!' I didn't want to 'play' being a reporter; they ain't 'playing'—"

"Aren't playing, Florence."

"Yes'm. They're not. Herbert's got a real printing press; Uncle Joseph gave it to him. It's a real one, mama, can't you understand?"

"I'll try," said Mrs. Atwater. "You mustn't get so excited about it, Florence."

"I'm not!" Florence turned vehemently. "I guess it'd take more than those two vile things and their old printin' press to get me excited! I don't care what they do; it's far less than nothing to me! All I wish is they'd fall off the fence and break their vile ole necks!"

With this manifestation of impersonal calmness, she turned again to the window; but her mother protested. "Do find something else to amuse you, Florence; and quit watching those foolish boys; you mustn't let them upset you so by their playing."

Florence moaned. "They don't 'upset' me, mama! They have no effect on me by the slightest degree! And I told you, mama, they're not 'playing.'"

"Then what are they doing?"

"Well, they're having a newspaper. They got the printing press and an office in Herbert's ole stable, and everything. They got somebody to give 'em some ole banisters and a railing from a house that was torn down somewheres, and then they got it stuck up in the stable loft, so it runs across with a kind of a gate in the middle of these banisters, and on one side is the printing press, and the other side they got a desk from that nasty little Henry Rooter's mother's attic; and a table and some chairs, and a map on the wall; and that's their newspaper office. They go out and look for what's the news, and write it down in ink; and then they go through the gate to the other side of the railing where the printing press is, and print it for their newspeper."

"But what do they do on the fence so much?"

"That's where they go to watch what the news is," Florence explained morosely. "They think they're so grand, sittin' up there, pokin' around. They go other places, too; and they ask people. That's all they said I could be!" Here the lady's bitterness became strongly intensified. "They said, maybe I could be one o' the ones they asked if I knew anything, sometimes, if they happen to think of it! I just respectf'ly told 'em I'd decline to wipe my oldest shoes on 'em to save their lives!"

Mrs. Atwater sighed. "You mustn't use such expressions, Florence."

"I don't see why not," the daughter objected. "They're a lot more refined than the expressions they used on me!"

"Then I'm very glad you didn't play with them."

But at this, Florence once more gave way to filial despair. "Mama, you just can't see through anything! I've said anyhow fifty times they ain't—aren't playing! They're getting up a real newspaper, and people buy it, and everything. They have been all over this part of town and got every aunt and uncle they have, besides their own fathers and mothers, and some people in the neighborhood, and Kitty Silver and two or three other colored people besides, that work for families they know. They're going to charge twenty-five cents a year, collect-in-advance because they want the money first; and even papa gave 'em a quarter last night; he told me so."

"How often do they publish their paper, Florence?" Mrs. Atwater inquired somewhat absently, having resumed her sewing.

"Every week; and they're goin' to have the first one a week from today."

"What do they call it?"

"The North End Daily Oriole. It's the silliest name I ever heard for a newspaper; and I told 'em so. I told 'em what I thought of it, I guess!"

"Was that the reason?" Mrs. Atwater asked.

"Was it what reason, mama?"

"Was it the reason they wouldn't let you be a reporter with them?"

"Pooh!" Florence exclaimed airily. "I didn't want anything to do with their ole paper. But anyway I didn't make fun o' their callin' it the North End Daily Oriole till after they said I couldn't be in it. Then I did, you bet!"

"Florence, don't say—"

"Mama, I got to say somep'm! Well, I told 'em I wouldn't be in their ole paper if they begged me on their bented knees; and I said if they begged me a thousand years I wouldn't be in any paper with such a crazy name; and I wouldn't tell 'em any news if I knew the President of the United States had the scarlet fever! I just politely informed 'em they could say what they liked if they was dying; I declined so much as wipe the oldest shoes I got on 'em!"

"But why wouldn't they let you be on the paper?" her mother insisted.

Upon this Florence became analytical. "Just so's they could act so important!" And she addded, as a consequence: "They ought to be arrested."

Mrs. Atwater murmured absently, but forbore to press her inquiry; and Florence was silent, in a brooding mood. The journalists upon the fence had disappeared from view, during the conversation with her mother; and presently she sighed and quietly left the room. She went to her own apartment, where, at a small and rather battered little white desk, after a period of earnest reverie, she took up a pen, wet the point in purple ink, and without any great effort or any critical delayings, produced a poem.

TEN MILLION "SURPLUS" GIRLS FORM A PROBLEM

Woman Must Be Regarded as Any Other Market Commodity, Says Prof. Patrick Giddes.

London, Sept. 2.—Woman must be regarded as any other market commodity—butter, eggs, wheat, cotton or stocks and bonds.

Her "worth" in society—the respect man has for her—depends exactly upon the demand, just as the law of supply and demand governs the price of butter and eggs. If the present surplus of unmarried women, resulting from the world war, continues her value will decline and civilization will be threatened with disaster.

In this exceedingly blunt manner Professor Patrick Geddes, eminent English sociologist, deals with the problem of what to do with the ten million "surplus" women of Europe, a problem that has stirred the minds of leading French and German sociogist ever since the after-war census statistics showed its gravity.

When Civilization Is High.

"Civilization is high or low according as women are at a premium or at a discount," says Professor Geddes. "In the present circumstances our one hope is America. There women are not so numerous. There is keen competition for them and they choose their own husbands. They are more highly respected, and if they retain that respect they will make their influence felt in Europe, despite the seemingly hopeless situation of many women here."

Other English social workers generally reflect Professor Geddes' views. With one accord they reject the suggestion by a French writer that European nations should "save" their unmarriageable daughters by legalizing polygamy.

"The gravest and most urgent need of our times is to give the women who can never marry something else to fill up their lives," says Miss Lillian Barker, director of a women's employment and training committee. There are hundreds of thousands of women who cannot marry and who, unless they are helped, cannot get a job. Who can blame them if, in order to live, they fall back upon their one remaining asset?"

The same fear that thousands of women will soon be forced to the streets was raised by a delegate to the meeting of the British League of Nations' Union. She openly charged that the Government is encouraging prostitution by driving girls out of positions in Government offices and industries.

Miss Margaret Bondfield, secretary of the Federation of Women Workers, does not think the situation is as bad as it is painted.

"We can avoid disaster," she says, "if we interest these women in social work, child welfare, maternity work and administration employment of many kinds."

60 CHICAGO GIRLS TO WEAR KNICKERS AS DRESS

Promise to Start Sept. 10 and Plan Club—Several Already Have Donned 'Em.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—Sixty girls who like the "knickers for women" idea will meet here September 10 to form a knickerbocker club. All the girls, according to Ellen Davis, leader in the movement, have promised to wear knickers on the streets after that date.

Already the golf courses are dotted daily with young women in knickers. Half a dozen girls are appearing on the streets here in the garments and business men say they are much more modest than the prevailing knee length skirt.

Display advertisements were placed in the newspapers here Wednesday by a wholesale clothing company, calling attention of women to the comfort, convenience and freedom of movement that knickers provide.

State street department store men said they had received many inquiries from women for knickers, which are selling at $30 a suit.

"The idea is excellent," said a department store manager, "and has only two drawbacks. First, girls who can afford two or more suits—two are considered necessary—would not continue wearing knickers if they become common, so to speak. Second, girls who regard $60 as quite an investment think twice before breaking into a new style, no matter how good looking and practical it may be."
